

BACKGROUND

It is 2032. Massive global financial turmoil has caused conflicts between major nations over previously shared resources. Any sort of prior allegiances and treaties are all in the past; now countries only think for themselves. This has led to a breakout of proxy conflicts. Despite the conflicts not escalating to a world war, the threat of nuclear weapons still loomed overhead. However, the war ended before it could start. No one knew where the virus came from, yet it eradicated civilizations as we know it.

A few countries secretly developed a new bioweapon that was designed to only destroy their enemies and thus seize control over the remaining global resource deposits. During initial tests, the viral weapon displayed promising potential and was thus deployed. It was a success.... Or so they thought.

29 days later, anarchy, turmoil, and chaos reigned. Governments destabilized in matter of weeks. Pockets of resistance and civilians that remain have banded together into survivor clans, doing anything to survive regardless of allegiances, flags, politics, and the countries they used to swear oath to. What was going to be a war-winning weapon ended up going out of control. The virus mutated swiftly after its deployment and infected the world's population on a mass scale, including the original creators.

With resources dwindling and the last bits of humanity living on a thread, the question remains: Who will make it to the end and who will make this last stand? It has been 29 days since the disaster, and this end of the month marks doomsday. DAY 1.

Throughout the world, remaining survivors of both military and civilian backgrounds formed alliances and did what they could to survive. Old conflicts was the least of their concerns. Now, it is all about surviving and scavenging up what remains of edible food and livable territory. The two largest remaining clans in the West are the United Sky Castle and the White Horse Alliance. Both groups have been in conflict over territory and resources. Unbeknownst to both clans, there is a hidden organization working the shadows known only as Scarlet Sector. No one really knows what they do nor the true power they hold. They have only started to appear in recent conflicts but it seems that both clans have been altered their objectives. Whether, they have been influenced by Scarlet Sector agents is unknown and how the conflicts will increase in intensity remains to be seen.
